

EXCLUSIVE: 'Love In the Wild' Series Premiere's First 14 Minutes (VIDEO)

by Maggie Furlong, posted Jun 28th 2011

What do you get when you cross 'The Amazing Race' and 'The Bachelor'? NBC's new destination reality dating show 'Love in the Wild.'

The show (which premieres Wed., June 29, 10PM ET) follows 10 single men and 10 single women, all looking for love in the jungles of Costa Rica, and we've got the exclusive first look at the premiere episode's first 14 minutes right here.

NBC

As one of the single ladies points out, their exotic locale is gorgeous and a fitting dating analogy: "It's a jungle out there."

In this clip, you'll get to meet host Darren McMullen, who describes the show as single people "pairing up for high-adrenaline adventures that will push dating to the limit, and give them the chance to truly get to know one another."

And you'll also get to know a little bit about each of the contestants, and how this show will play out -- crocodiles, snakes and all. As one of the guys says: "When you take 10 guys and 10 girls and you throw them in a situation like this, it's gonna bring people together really fast."

And in the first challenge, another male suitor is already feeling the pressure: "I've known Kym at this point for maybe 10 minutes, and next thing I know, I'm on a makeshift raft with her ... you're gonna learn real quick if you can stand a person or not."

Watch our exclusive sneak peek and tell us what you think in the comments.